Following great public interest in the project spawned from the cover story in the Riverine Herald newspaper, along with the C4EM workshop, the Echuca Moama Arts Alliance newsletter and radio interviews on ABC Bendigo and Shepparton, the Bridge Arts Project has launched its official website.

The website contains a wealth of information about the project's mission and progress. The public can also read about the project's steering committee members, media resources, cultural and business affiliates and how to join their social networking page on Facebook. A "VOTE NOW" page also allows the public to have their say on the project.

The committee encourages the local and wider community as well as the project's stakeholders and general media to visit the website, bookmark the website to keep abreast of progress of this monumental arts initiative which will highlight the plight of Australia's indigenous during pre and post colonial times as well as reflecting other ethnic influxes during settlement with interpretive artworks on and around the proposed new Echuca Moama bridge.
